Season 6 Episode 19 - Listener Questions

Welcome to Another Episode of Mediumship Matters!

Hello, hello! It's me, Hannah Macintyre, back with another episode of Mediumship Matters. How are you all doing? I love answering your listener questions, and today, you've got me thinking once again. Keep them coming!

Can Spirit Show Up for a Listener During a Demonstration?

First up, we have a fascinating question from Annie. She listened to a live reading I did in May 2024 and had a bit of a spooky moment. She recognized all the evidence given in a reading—even down to the cross-stitch reference—and wondered: Could her mum, who has passed, have shown herself during my demonstration?

Annie, this is such an interesting question!

Spirit are very intelligent, and they don't waste energy bringing through someone that no one in the room can take. But I do believe they love to give little hellos! If you're a regular listener and deeply connected to Spirit, your mum would know this. She might have worked with another spirit to nudge a message your way—just enough to say, Hey, I'm here! without hijacking someone else's reading.

So no, I don't think it was your mum I was speaking to, but I do believe she gave you a little spiritual wink through the reading. And honestly, that's one of the most beautiful things about Spirit—they find ways to let us know they're around, even when we're not expecting it.

Hearing a Living Person's Voice... in Spirit Form?

Now, onto a jaw-dropping story from Samantha! She and her son both heard her mother singing la la la at home—but her mother wasn't there. In fact, she was alive and well, and still is today! Samantha then heard the exact same singing herself, the next morning, at the exact time her mother would have been getting ready for work.

What's going on here?!

My take? This wasn't your mother's spirit, but rather a spirit mimicking her. Sometimes, spirits use familiar sounds or voices to let us know they're present. It's also possible that your son, having already associated the voice with his grandmother, influenced how you perceived it. Our brains love filling in the gaps!

If anyone listening has experienced something similar—a spirit mimicking the voice of someone still alive—please share your stories! I'd love to hear more about this phenomenon.

A Psychic Time Slip? Seeing Someone Before They Arrive

Samantha's next story takes us into the Twilight Zone (in the best way). She was waiting for her friend, Mary Jo, to arrive at a restaurant. She glanced in her rearview mirror and saw Mary Jo walking toward the building. But when she got out to meet her, Mary Jo was gone. A few moments later, Mary Jo pulled into the parking lot—in the exact same outfit, with the same faint purple tint in her hair.

So... what happened?

This sounds like a time slip or a moment of precognitive clairvoyance. Sometimes, time gets a little wibbly-wobbly (technical term), and we see something before it actually happens. Some people believe this is how déjà vu works—a tiny glimpse of a moment before it unfolds. Samantha, you may have just tapped into a little preview of the future!

Again, if anyone listening has had an experience like this, let's compare notes!

Soulmates, Soul Contracts & Overwhelming Connections

Next, a deep dive into soul connections with Zoe, a listener from The Gateway. Zoe met someone and had an instant, overwhelming feeling of connection—so intense she burst into tears. Though the relationship was short-lived, she can't shake the feeling that they were meant to meet. Was this a soulmate? A past life connection? A soul contract?

Here's my take:

- I do believe in soulmates—but not just in the romantic sense. Friends, children, even colleagues can be soulmates. And no, that doesn't always mean it's easy or perfect.
- Soul contracts exist, but they're not rigidly pre-planned. I believe we come into life with certain themes and experiences we're meant to navigate, but the details are fluid. Maybe this person wasn't the one, but they were one of the people meant to nudge you onto your spiritual path.
- Energy resonance is powerful. Sometimes, we meet someone whose energy provides exactly what we need at that moment. Once we receive it, the connection fades—and that's okay.

If you've had an overwhelming connection like this, did it lead you somewhere new? Let's talk about it!

Does Spirit Influence Health Issues?

Zoe also asked if physical ailments—like chronic gout in her foot—could be Spirit's way of sending a message. After all, her tarot cards have been telling her to slow down and listen to her intuition.

My perspective? Our health is primarily influenced by energy imbalances, not Spirit directly 'giving' us symptoms.

- Sometimes, our bodies do reflect what's going on spiritually—like feeling heavy in your chest when you're emotionally burdened.
- But not everything is a sign. Sometimes, gout is just gout. (Harsh, but true.)
- The best way to tell? Tune into how you feel. Do you want to slow down? Or do you feel called to push forward? Your own intuition will always be the best guide.

A Banging Demonstration (For Once!)

And to wrap it up—I had an amazing demonstration this week! After a challenging event where the audience was disengaged and people were on their phones (ugh), I had one in Ipswich where everything just clicked.

The audience was fantastic, the evidence was strong, and I had so much fun. It just goes to show—mediumship is unpredictable, and you can't let one bad experience knock you down. Keep going, because the next one might be incredible!

Final Thoughts & Call to Action

If you enjoyed this episode, please leave a review! It really helps me keep this podcast going. And if you're ready to deepen your connection to Spirit, check out The Gateway at
