Episode S7, Ep 31 – Students Interview Hannah: Mediumship, Parenting, Psychic Gifts, Predictions & Personal Truths

In this special interactive episode of Mediumship Matters, evidential medium Hannah Macintyre hands the microphone to her Gateway students — inviting them to ask absolutely anything they've always wanted to know. The result is a warm, funny, deeply honest conversation about mediumship, family life, psychic development, intuition, and the realities of working spiritually in 2025.

★ Music, Rap & “Stars in Their Eyes” — Hannah’s Unlikely Warm-Up Routine

The students open with a playful question:

If Hannah had to perform on Stars in Their Eyes, who would she be?

Her answer: Plan B — or possibly Iggy Azalea or the Fugees — because rap is how she psychs herself up before demonstrations.

She explains:

- She “raps the whole way” to a dem when driving alone
- She calls it “warming up the throat chakra” (but really, it’s just fun)
- It burns off nerves and gets her in flow
- It also makes her “marginally asthmatic, true story”

★ Would Hannah Want Her Daughter to Become a Medium?

A heartfelt question follows:

What would you say if your daughter wanted to be a professional medium?

Hannah reflects:

- She’d be shocked — no one in her house is particularly interested in mediumship
- Teenagers would rather “die than learn from their mum”
- She’d feel protective because mediumship is emotionally demanding
- But she would support her completely if it made her happy
- A mother’s instinct is to worry no matter the profession

She also shares a sweet moment:

Her daughter once attended a live demonstration and finally understood what her mum actually does when she vanishes off to work.

★ What Does Hannah’s Husband Believe?

Hannah shares candidly about her husband’s relationship to her work:

- He used to worry what people would think
- At first he asked her not to tell others what she did
- Over time, hearing people’s spiritual experiences softened him
- He’s “more of a believer than he used to be,” especially after Hannah unexpectedly brought through someone he didn’t know had died

Still:

- It's not "his bag"
- He doesn't understand the constant vulnerability
- Or why she repeatedly steps into emotional difficulty
- Or why she keeps going back to an exhausting profession

But he respects it — and sees its impact.

★ Demonstrations: Passion, Burnout & The Reality of 2025

Students ask if Hannah plans to return to more in-person demonstrations.

Her honest response:

- Demonstrating is her passion
- She loves live mediumship
- But time, family life, and business logistics make it challenging
- Social media changes mean she no longer reaches her own audience reliably
- Events are harder to fill, making them financially risky
- She's committed to Canterbury this November but unsure about next year
- She's learning to "follow the energy" and surrender

Mediumship isn't just the event — it's:

- Travel
- Exhaustion
- Being away from home
- Emotional output
- And (currently) the unpredictable online landscape

This year is "another surrender year," watching to see where Spirit places her next.

★ Are In-Person Courses Returning?

Right now: not many.

She still teaches:

- The upcoming January in-person training
- The international evidential week-long experience next year
- Occasional weekends (even when not profitable) because she honours commitments

But she also admits:

- Social media's decline has hit every industry
- She has limited financial flexibility while she invests heavily in Spirit Social
- She refuses large numbers because she wants meaningful connection

This is a recalibration year — not the end.

★ Predictions, Pregnancies & Driving Tests: Can Hannah "Fortune Tell"?

Students ask whether Hannah can instinctively predict:

- Driving test outcomes
- Baby genders
- Success in life events

Her answer:

- She can sometimes sense things spontaneously
- But forced prediction? No
- Free will makes many outcomes fluid
- Emotional involvement makes it harder
- Mediums who give major life predictions risk influencing people's choices

She explains:

- Some aspects of life are predestined (soul-contract anchor points)
- But the paths between them are flexible
- Predictions can become self-fulfilling or self-limiting

“People want a set of instructions,” she laughs — but mediumship isn’t that kind of magic.

★ Are Mediums Who Saw Spirit as Children “Better”?

A common question in development circles:

Are mediums who saw Spirit as kids naturally more gifted?

Hannah reframes the whole conversation:

- Many claim they “saw spirit,” yet can’t describe loved ones accurately
- Some of the best mediums she has ever seen were not natural — they were trained
- When it comes easily, people may not refine their skills
- When it doesn’t, they work harder and become stronger practitioners

She adds:

- We all had psychic experiences as children
- We simply forget them
- Or our parents dismiss them
- Or the memory was never anchored by a reaction
- Children astral travelling, hearing names called, vivid visitation dreams — all normal

Hannah even discovered years later that she herself heard spirit calling her name as a child, though she had no memory.

★ Manifesting, Soul Contracts & Privilege

A powerful discussion unfolds around Law of Attraction.

Hannah’s view:

- Manifesting teachings often come from privileged positions
- She questions LOA influencers who would tell a child in poverty that their suffering is caused by mindset
- Soul contracts, circumstances, and chosen experiences shape lives
- Mindset does influence opportunities
- But not all outcomes are created equal

She summarises it well:

“It’s not black and white. Manifesting is real — but it exists within a complex web of soul contracts, privilege, timing, and personal evolution.”

★ Euphoria in Mediumship: Hannah’s Most Magical Moments

Students ask:

What was your most euphoric mediumship experience?

She answers without hesitation:

Glastonbury.

Her last demonstration there felt extraordinary:

- The energy “just flowed”
- Evidence came with astonishing clarity
- She shocked herself
- The audience was spiritually open and supportive
- She felt truly herself — in jeans, sparkles and trainers

It was everything a medium dreams of — effortless connection, laughter, validation, power. But she admits she is her own worst critic and often focuses on what she could have done better.

★ Unique Spirits, The Victorian Lady & Family History Mediumship

One student asks:

Has Hannah ever had a spirit from “ages ago”?

Yes — and a favourite story is the Victorian woman she brought through during a demonstration:

- Hannah described her clothing, personality, carriage, and era
- She doubted anyone would recognise her
- But a woman researching her family tree exactly matched the evidence
- She later even sent Hannah a photograph of the ancestor

This experience proved how much more the spirit world can do when mediums push beyond the expected.

She also encourages students to try family-tree linking themselves — it can be amazing.

★ Can Spirit Communicate Across Language Barriers?

Absolutely.

- Spirit does not use a voice box
- Communication is energetic, not linguistic
- A sitter’s language is irrelevant
- Only direct phrases in another language are hard, because the medium has no internal reference

Essence, emotion, personality and symbolic evidence all translate.

★ Life Chaos, Development & “Testing”

Students ask how Hannah managed mediumship development when life kept derailing her.

Hannah’s answer is both comforting and confronting:

- Life chaos never stops — not during development, not after
- You must choose your mediumship through the mess
- Sometimes Spirit pushes through discomfort to provoke action
- “Shaken-up bottle” energy often inspires breakthroughs
- Guilt, especially as a mother, is part of the journey
- She once left her crying daughter to go practise — and still wrestles with it

But:

You never lose your mediumship.

It’s “like riding a bike.”

The moment you reach for Spirit, the link returns.

★ Books, Projects & What’s Next

Students ask about future plans.

Hannah reveals:

- Book 2 is currently being edited
- Spirit nudged her to get on with it during a recent trip to Greece
- She’s hoping to release it for Christmas
- Spirit Social has HUGE future expansions planned — she can see “iteration 400” already
- She battles impatience because she wants everything built now
- But the evolution is steady and exciting

Many projects are simmering behind the scenes.

★ Mastermind Topic: What Else Does Hannah Know?

A fun closing question:

If Hannah were on Mastermind, what would her specialist subject be?

Her answers:

- Cooking
- Song lyrics (her brain stores thousands effortlessly)
- Stephen King novels

She cannot remember directions...

...but can recall 20-year-old lyrics perfectly.

(Spirit has a sense of humour.)

Closing Thoughts

The episode ends with laughter, gratitude and affection.

Hannah thanks her students for being kind — she was ready for “humdingers.”

She reminds them she wouldn’t be as gentle if the roles reversed.

This conversational, intimate episode offers a rare, behind-the-scenes look at her:

- as a mother
- as a medium
- as a teacher
- as a human navigating chaos, purpose and passion

A perfect addition to Season 7.
