Season 2 Episode 73 - Listener Questions

Introduction

Hannah Macintyre: Hello and welcome to Mediumship Matters! I'm your host, Hannah Macintyre, and today, I'm coming to you with a new microphone! If you're watching on YouTube, you'll see me in all my glory. I even put makeup on for this – so it's a special occasion! More importantly, today's episode is packed with updates, personal experiences, and some listener questions that I can't wait to dive into. So, let's get started!

Finding New Venues for Mediumship Events

Recently, I've been on a mission to book venues for my upcoming events, and let me tell you—it's been a journey. Some venues have been quick and easy to secure, while others have been... well, let's say less cooperative. Even some that know me and my work are hesitant about hosting a mediumship night. It's a challenge, but I'm determined to find the right spaces.

The good news? I've secured a gorgeous venue in Tunbridge Wells and another in West London—making it more accessible for more of you! If you've been waiting for me to come up north, well, I'm getting closer (baby steps!). Tickets for the London event should be available in about six weeks, so keep an eye out!

And in other exciting news—I've also booked a retreat for next summer! So, plenty happening, and the energy feels buzzy and exciting, which is just how I love to work!

A Funeral Experience That Taught Me About Evidence in Mediumship

I recently attended a funeral for a lovely neighbour, and the experience was unexpectedly profound. It was the first funeral I've attended where I wasn't deeply grieving, which allowed me to observe in a way I never had before.

One moment that struck me was when his grandson shared a simple yet powerful memory—his granddad always offering him a can of Coke, which, upon closer inspection, turned out to be four years out of date!

It was a reminder of what really matters in mediumship. We often strive for big evidence, but sometimes, the smallest details hold the most meaning. That's what spirit wants us to bring through—not just broad facts, but those personal, emotionally charged moments that truly connect with the sitter.

So, if you ever feel hesitant about attending a funeral for someone you weren't incredibly close to, consider it from a different perspective—it might offer you unexpected lessons and insights.

Listener Questions

1. Choosing Happiness When Surrounded by Negativity

Listener Andy asks: How do you choose happiness when someone close to you is full of negativity? I want to continue my Reiki practice, but there's so much negative energy in my home that I feel blocked.

My thoughts: Andy, I hear you! As an empath and a healer, you've likely spent your whole life trying to fix energetic disharmony. It's part of your soul's path, but it can be exhausting. Here's what I suggest:

- Prioritize Your Energy: Happiness isn't about eliminating all negativity—it's about keeping your own energy tank full. Ensure you're doing things that bring you joy and fulfillment.
- Create Boundaries: Your healing space should be separate from the negative energy at home. Find a way to take your Reiki practice elsewhere—perhaps a rented room, a hospice, or even volunteering.
- Shift Your Intention: Instead of saying, "I don't see how this is possible," shift to: "This is what I want. Show me how to make it happen." The universe listens to the energy behind our words.

Don't let circumstances hold you back. You have a gift—don't let it go to waste!

2. Do Spirits Reincarnate, and Can We Still Contact Them?

Listener Tanya asks: If a spirit reincarnates, does that mean they are no longer part of the spiritual collective and unavailable for mediumship?

My belief:

- Our souls are multidimensional, existing in various timelines and realities simultaneously.
- A part of our soul stays in the spirit world while other aspects reincarnate.
- Time is not linear in the spirit world—so a soul can return to Earth for learning in any era, even before their last incarnation.
- When we connect with spirit, we're communicating with the part of their soul that remains accessible. So yes, even if they've reincarnated, you can still contact them!

Fascinating, isn't it? I love these deep questions!

3. What to Do After a Confusing Mediumship Reading

Listener Sue shares: I had a mediumship reading where none of the messages made sense. The medium kept bringing through 'mother figures,' but I couldn't take any of them. Was I being ungrateful, or was something off?

My thoughts: First, you are NOT ungrateful. A reading should bring through someone you recognize—otherwise, what's the point? It sounds like the medium was having an off day (we all do!) but didn't handle it properly. A professional medium should:

- Be honest if they're struggling and offer a refund if needed.
- Avoid vague terms like "mother figure" and instead trust their connection.
- Build power with one spirit at a time, rather than jumping from one to another.

If you get another reading, don't be afraid to set an intention for who you'd like to hear from. You deserve a meaningful connection!
